FOREWORD

Because time has such a way of erasing memories, we have tried to stop the flight of time in the 1940 Hi-Life by the use of pictures of you at work and at play. If we have remembered some things you would rather forget, well, we did our best.

DEDICATION

To the one whom everyone considers a regular fellow for his good sportsmanship, the spirit which he has instilled in the boys and girls, and for his fine idealism, we, the class of 1940 dedicate this twenty-first volume of Hi-Life to Mr. Fred Maasdam.

INTRODUCTION TO HI-LIFE

An annual is more than a mere book; it is a record, so to speak, of yourself, your friends, and your school's activity. Into each printed page some thought or recollection is woven, memories that years hence may draw many a wishful sigh from the reader. To keep these cherished thoughts alive, an annual must picture those friends and occurrences as they really were, as you and others knew them. With this in mind, the Annual Staff decided to concentrate on informality in the planning of this year's Hi-Life. The result, with few exceptions, was a myriad of small group pictures, taken at various time intervals during the day, ranging from early morning to late afternoon. These pictures, in which the subjects are engaged in some activity or occupation, tell a meaningful, and vivid story, and illustrate at the same time the extent of the High School curriculum.

Of course, some formal photographs are not only a desired feature, but a necessity, as, for instance, the senior panels. But in all pictures in which formality could be avoided, an informal group was arranged, preserving the spirit of intimacy and familiarity as much as possible.

After having read the preceding brief introduction, we are sure that you will appreciate the following pages to a greater extent, and hope that you will evaluate this 1940 Hi-Life more than any other Washington High School has ever published.

ANNUAL STAFF

TO WORK WE GO

Miss Irwin appears to be alone at her desk, but she is never lonesome. Someone is always asking a question, the telephone is ringing, or there are four or five other things to do. Such is the life of a school secretary, but in spite of this, you are always assured of a cheery welcome.

Behind the scenes, Mr. Maxwell is a good stage hand. Perhaps there are many who don't know it, but it is part of his job as janitor to pull the curtain of every play produced on our stage. He is known as a cheerful person, and a fine gentleman.

"Good morning to you"—and here we have Marjorie Benson, Arlys Myers, and Paul Benson, whom we snapped just as they pulled up in their trusty Ford, ready to start in on another day of hard work.

Among those students one seldom sees rushing to school late are Mary C. Redlinger, Mary Dreckmeier, Neva Robertson, Frances Turnipseed and Wilma Simons. Mingled in with these girls is Jack Dankwardt, but I can't quite decide which one of these beauties he has his eye on, can you?

Mounted on the front steps, we see one of the outstanding Junior gangs. These girls are great chums, and are together at all times. I am not sure of the hours Morgans' Cafe keeps, but most any time you can find Shirley, Thelma, Roberta, Eleanor, Gayle, Bette, Margaret, Eloise, at this popular spot.

One-two-three-well, my goodness—did all seven of you children ride to school in this car? Well, at least, some of the jolts of their rough country roads might be eliminated by being packed in so tight. Included in this group are Esther, Lawrence and George Swift, Martha and Donald Hines, Frances Leeper and Mary Ellen Duensing.

MR. PRESIDENT, PLEASE!

"Home, sweet home room! There's no place like my home room."

In the United States each year one week is set aside for remembrance and reverence for our flag. Here we see Robert Gates of Junior Home Room 101 ably demonstrating correct flag etiquette to his fellow Home Room members—Gayle Davis, Gerald McGaffey, Theresa Williams, and Dale Hoyle.

Each Home Room divides its week into separate days—each for a different type of activity. A spelldown is in progress in Home Room 102 led by Viola Marek. Those Junior friends she's trying to "down" are Joan Gerdes, Elizabeth Varney, Marion Reeves, Charles Lemley, and Max Haifley. Which are the smarter—boys or girls?

In each Home Room there is a safety committee. Its duty is to lead discussions on any matter relating to safety. Tom Randall of Senior Home Room 203 holds spellbound his audience consisting of Frances Stewart, Kay Dunbar, Jack Wilson, and Lawrence Swift. We're not sure what he's reading, probably of some disastrous accident.

Your editor hunted high and low to find a studious student. She thought their existence extinct until she found David Brinning, Virginia Sheetz, and Mildred Miller hard at their studies in Home Room 112. These Juniors have as their motto, "Be prepared." To be sure, a little studying sandwiched in, has never hurt any student.

Another Home Room knows well the advancement afforded by fifteen minutes in study. Thus profitably spending their time we see Betty Glider, Darlene Nelson, Lee Hochle, and Charles Durst of Home Room 207. My, what powers of concentration. Is that natural, or was it brought on by an outside influence—such as a teacher?

Miss Randell may have been shoved off in the basement with her Home Room, but that certainly didn't put out the flames created by her live wire home room members. From reliable sources we hear that there is never a dull moment in that room. Here around the rectangular "round table" are Irene Lane, Nellie Wallace, Dorothy Darnel, and Lyle Edmundson discussing the morning bulletin.

Every once in awhile good old W. H. S. needs a little entertainment to put folks back into a good mood. That smiling Master of Ceremonies for the morning is Francis Scaneider. As far as Freshman Home Room 202 is concerned Francis is tops. Wonder what he's saying. Just see those smiles displayed by Barbara Musil, Darlene Sojka, Jaye Varney, Robert Clark, and Martha Cherwinker.

In the days gone by, all work was considered the job of the high school student. But times have changed for "all work and no play makes Archie a dull boy." Thus pictures hold the interest of Marie Sojka, Irene Coffman, Theresa Bruty, Archie Euwer, and Paul Peiffer of Sophomore Home Room 115. Many such activities are carried on in the home rooms independently by the students.

If news reports are not included in the week's schedule of each home room the students have missed a vital building block for their personalities. In this interest the members of Home Room 113 find something of note in the Scholastic magazine. Fred Reid, William Steele, Ned Barden, and Phyllis Crone (who love "their" news) follow the print as Helen Patterson calls to their attention the outstanding points.

Early this year "the office" sent out little books which dealt with various subjects. Among these were stories interestingly told about correct etiquette. Robert Nicola, Donald Simmering, Jeanne Shalla, and Mabel Hayes take time to "brush up" on their etiquette as Marjorie Benson reads to them in Freshman Home Room 105.

Spell-downs are the pastimes of both old and young. And when other things to do fail to "pan-out," what is a better time for a good old spell-down? The fellow pronouncing the words is Donald Doran. Those still standing are Robert Rohrer, John Jeffries, Richard Crawford, Betty Patterson, and Virginia Hopping. The two girls of Home Room 2 already spelled down are Lois Humston and Helen Sheetz.

When you stop to take into consideration the various things that people of this earth have done for pleasure, you have also to wonder how the races lasted through it all. Take for instance, Home Room 106, composed solely of seniors. They really do some fine things there. For one thing—here's Dorothy Humston telling a fairy story to those innocents: Richard Minick, Robert Crossett, Betty Redlinger, Raberh Davis, and Richard Long.

If you've ever been in room 206 you know that this Chemistry Lecture Room makes a nice home room—balcony and all. There is equipment there, such that a group might put on any sort of program one might desire. But today Donald Gingery is presenting something of interest from a paper to Wilbur Bruty, Kenneth Van Doran, Virginia Payne, Robert Swift, and Francis Leeper.

Another home room that puts its time to good use is 103. Confidentially, we hope that no one is holding back a funny magazine to concentrate upon when the teacher looks away. We're sure, however, that these students: Edna Schaeffer, Esther Howard, June Longer, and Tommy Richards, won't do that. But that's all right, sophomores, keep it up and you'll succeed—maybe.

SMALL MUSIC GROUPS

The brass sextet composed of Joan Michels, Robert McLaughlin, David Neiswanger, Norma Johnson, Charles Suttan, and Charles Mayo work diligently to achieve the most from one of the most popular instrumental groups.

Four smiling sophomore girls compose the clarinet quartet. Practice makes perfect, at least that's what Audrey Hotle, Caroleen Sartor, Georgeanne Rudiger, and Dorothy Turner would probably say if asked why they practiced so much.

Bob Hammer, Eugene Dunlap, and Merle Turnipseed don't seem to mind at all having Maxine Guenther give them stiff competition in the saxophone quartet.

Girls, girls, and more girls three seniors (Clara Huber, Mildred Hughes, and Carolyn Strong) and a freshman (Genevieve Baker) find playing together in the flute quartet something to smile about.

One man in a quintet may be worth two in any other group . . . but just the same, Max Birka seems to enjoy his work in the woodwind quintet with Verla Boshart, Dorothy Turner, Frances Porter, and Carolyn Strong.

With trombones at each end, and cornets in the middle, Robert Faulkner, Joan Michels, Robert McLaughlin, and Charles Mayo agreed to pose as the brass quartet.

GIRLS' GLEE CLUB

NO LICKIN' NO LARNIN'

"You must speak a little louder", said Miss Flood, the speech teacher, to Raymond Weeks as he concluded his demonstration in speech class. Dean Cox, Richard Bordwell, Betty Evans, and George Swift seem to be very interested.

My! Don't Dorothy Watson, Evan Fishburn, and James Bey look pleasant! They are studying geometry III and they look as though they were enjoying this class in geometric figures which is taught by Miss Mercer.

Miss Kyle's junior English class is, in this picture, reading "The Emporer Jones". "And so the Emporer Jones was killed by a silver bullet," Ethel Turner finished the play with this quotation as Grant Humston, Marilyn Green, Wayne Witthoft, Irene Westen, and Donald Kiesey silently read along with her.

Miss Randell's homemaking 1 girls enjoy learning the fundamentals of sewing and art. Dorothy Dankwardt is wondering, "Let's see, what pattern should I choose?" while Marguerite Beason, Mary Ardith Jarrard, and Betty Kelly are concentrating on their aprons.

"Oh!" exclaimed Donald Mitchell as the photographer snapped this picture of Edward Nardy, George Miller, and Maurice Koehler in architectural drawing, supervised by Mr. Bickel. But don't think that the boys always study as hard as they seem to be in this picture.

"And then . . .," added Marjorie Thompson as she finished her original story as one of the Canterbury Pilgrims in Miss Wilson's English Literature class. Although Alberta Godfrey, Richard Wanerus, Keith Gillespie, and Bette Michels look interested, they are probably thinking of the thesis that has to be finished by the end of the last six weeks.

"And this is the region which produces food for our country", explains Mary Ellen Duensing as she points to the center of the map of the United States while Helen Havel, Edna Schaeffer, Victor Mayer, and Roger Sheetz concentrate on what she is saying.

"Ground, sticks, ground, sticks, ground, sticks, hit!" repeats Mary Catherine Redlinger as she and Esther Howard try to start off on a game of "box hockey."

"If only he wouldn't dictate so rapidly," thought Nyla Reinier, Florence Godwin, and Marjorie Sheetz as Mr. Le Moine saunters along at 90 words a minute. They are now striving for the 100 word award.

"What did you say the answer to this one was?" asked Paul Boyd as Mr. Lussky passed by. But Lloyd Scott, Sara Jane Lemley, Jeanne Davis, and Nellie Wallace, seem to be having no trouble whatsoever and they really look quite studious.

"Whoops, that isn't right," thinks Vernon Richardson as he erases his mistake while writing his assignment in American History but Juanita Miller, Lafe Hamil and T. J. Berdo seem to be getting along quite nicely. This is one of the many classes supervised by Miss Minick.

"And in the winter . . .", explains Vernon Weeks, as he, Bob Brown, Richard Boyer and Virginia Hop- ping demonstrate how the rays of the sun strike the earth during the different seasons of the year thus determining the amount of daylight and darkness during each day. Their instructor is Mr. Parsons.

X EQUALS QUANTITY UNKNOWN

Bells ringing—keys typing monotonously—a groan as the wrong key is struck. Yes, indeed, it could be only one thing—a typing class. Here, we find Phyllis Sisk, Wilbur Bruty, Beatrice Replogle, Max Darnell, and Winona Bower looking very sober, as such a task demands.

Donald Klein, Ruth Humston, Richard Moore, Robert Conner, and Willis Booth do not seem to know when they've had enough, for they stay in one room for two classes—world history and English. It is generally believed that these sophomores are just too tired to care.

Eleanor Turner, Lucy Jones, Leila Jarvis, Nellie Wallace, and Esther Hayes, under the supervision of Miss Marjorie Stivers, enjoy studying the world's best selling book, the Bible.

Industrial art students take their subject literally and work hard on their drawings. John Votruba, Gaile Watson, and Bill Arnold are learning how to draw the circles.

"It isn't that it's so hard to write; it's just that I can't read it after I've written it." That's what they all say about that thing called shorthand. Caryle Shaw, Betty Neiswanger, and Alice Finke try to "keep up" with Miss Ruth Miner's dictating.

It's not your business; it's theirs. At least, business arithmetic is Mary Hesseltine's, Lyle Edmondson's, Robert Crone's, and Ned Barden's. They believe that in the future a good head for figures will not come amiss. At any rate—you can't go wrong if you know the right answer.

"Ignorance of the law is no excuse," says Mr. Melvin Gingerich to his commercial law students—Lyle Edmondson, Paul Benson, Mary Hesseltine, and Norma Johnson. And so, when it comes to tests they take the hint and try not to be ignorant of the laws.

A "Reader's Digest" is accredited four stars by its reviewer Helen Hayes in the junior English class. Thelma Flynn and Merle Booth prepare to start a lively discussion over anything from diets to politics.

Future scientists learn why red is red—or something. Anyway—these freshmen seem to like their class of general science. Iris Rath, Arlys Myers, Eugene Grecian, and Arlo Burham are the scientific students.

We know it's posed—because few boys make such good use of their time in library. Phil Nelson's smile is evidence against him that he knows the photographer is lurking about.

Now, listen here, Claudius L. Stringer, if you think for one minute"—Paul Boyd stands ready to run from Marge Faulkner's angry finger. Eleanor Keagy, Don Bishop, Georgeanne Rudiger, and Caroleen Sartor look on amazed as the cast for the all-high school play is snapped in action after an evening performance.

DINNER PAIL PARADE

"Come on, Klein, buy a paper, pleads William Steele, and Junior digs into his pocket for a nickel. Did you get any publicity this week, Junior?"

Tommy Walker, Robert Custer, Donald Simmering, Bill Houseal, Raymond Bell seem to be enjoying their lunch very much. They are just a few of those who make up the Dinner Pail Parade.

"A Clark, please," says Joan Gerdes as she hands Virginia Sheetz 5c while Charlotte Longer tries to persuade Jean Sigafosse, Henry Godwin and Lawrence Swift to buy one, too.

BACK TO THREE "R'S"

Some say advanced algebra is difficult, but it does not appear to be so from the expressions on the faces of Bill Burham, Vernon Beenblossom, Richard Baker and David Neiswanger. Of course, they are having a good time because with Miss Mercer's expert guidance, work is really easy.

These people will surely know their civics. Out of the ninety-nine question quiz, we are sure no one missed more than fifteen because Miss Shields goes to the bottom of her subject. Joan Brown, Ellen Gidley, Donald Sheperd, and Jack Wilson are really enthused over this test.

BLOK — How can you make book out of that? Shucks, you can't! The business world should never suffer from loss of typists in these times. At first it seems tough, but soon the keys start clicking off with such speed under the fingers that one finds he must slow down, so that he won't make the typing teacher stay up all night checking errors. Here we find Helen Raber, Glen Hamilton, Duane Felton, Edward Bidwell, and Gailen Brown checking errors after a timed test.

If we all knew more about history of very ancient times, maybe some of this information would help in figuring out some of the world problems of today. At any rate, that's why Gladys Fritz, Doris Custer, Betty Duncan, and Clifford Brown are working so hard.

An employer would have no trouble in securing a good-looking book-keeper if he would visit this class. His only trouble would be in choosing one from these five capable girls who are: Eleanor Kimmel, Julia Harvey, Mercedes Miller, Twila Mangold, and Charlotte Longer.

Every man loves a good cook and that is the reason Miss Randell's homemaking classes are so popular. At least that's what Orlena Augustine, Wanda Custer, Arlene Churchill, Wilma Snyder, and Gloria Nayadley think.

In the future, don't be surprised to see the names of Gerald Wells, Betty Keifer, and Donald Morrison in the headlines of the leading science magazines. These young scientists are performing an experiment and seem to be doing it with the greatest skill and confidence.

MAGISTER BONUS ERAT

This year for the first time, art was given as a subject in high school. Washington was very fortunate to have someone as talented as Miss Wood come and be an instructor here. Keith Gillespie, Roberta Wheelan, and Archie Euwer are appreciating and enjoying their work.

Judging from their looks, the two snarling gentlemen pictured above haven't enjoyed their engagement as much as they thought they would. Bob Flynn, the one who looks as if he had been hit by an express train, has just delivered a neat left hook to the jaw of his sparring partner, D'wayne Felton, which might account for the fact that D'wayne saw four bluebirds fly into the gym.

In a boxing match one can hear plenty of grunts, but it takes wrestling to get the groans, as any one of the interested onlookers above will tell you. Furnishing the groans, in this photograph, are Dale Hoyle and Dick Baker, but glancing at the squirming heap on the mat, we'll let you sort them out—your guess is as good as ours.

Wrestling, say athletic authorities, is a true test of one's strength and endurance; verification of this statement: just visit the gym some day and watch the boys learning some new holds. Those pictured on this page are beginning to realize that experience sometimes teaches quite a painful lesson, especially if it's taught with hammerlocks and half-Nelsons.

ALL WORK AND NO PLAY—

"Boy, did I ever hit that ball!" beams Mary Ellen Duensing as she and June Longer play Ping Pong with two other girls in gym class. Many other interesting games are played in the class, too.

"Say, I wonder who sucked me into this Latin class anyway?" says Daryl Longer to himself as he tries to conjugate verbs in Latin class. Martha Hines, Ailene Huber, Daryl, Betty Dawson, Georgia Wiley and Margaret Lemley are shown in the picture.

"Gee Whiz! I'll bet Miss Flood can't even conjugate this sentence!" groans Don Crossett. Don, Dorothy Bear, Martha Birka, and Robert Downing are seen laboring over their lessons in freshman English class.

"Boy, I would rather play football for Fred than study this stuff for him," thinks Bob Flynn as he tries to study. Ted Morgan, Daryl Hoyle, Maxine Logan, Mary Jones, Skeet Wolf and Bob are apparently studying very hard on the anatomy of the human body in physiology class. Norene McFarland, Helen Hayes, and Dick Knupp evidently have their studying done.

"Darn that sock," hums Martha Turnipseed as she darns her sock. Beulah Stewart, Norma Hotle, Kathryn Nebel sew and visit in homemaking class. Besides sewing the class takes up room management, child management, and other subjects related to homemaking.

Struggling over the problems of bisecting lines and diameters of circles are Marjorie Coon, Richard Harvey, Marion Beason, and Richard Dawson. They are receiving advice from their mathematics teacher, Miss Mercer.

Sociologically speaking, this picture is unbalanced, but we'll bet Darrell Swift isn't begrudging the fact that the ratio is three girls to one boy. Jean Brower, Darrell, Madalyn Peters, and Dorothy Conner are seen pouring over the problems of the complicated Human Race in sociology class.

"Wonder what the temperature of this is?" queries John Gardner. The fellows are working on one of their experiments in laboratory in physics class. Marion Ferguson supplies the scientific brain work as Richard Long and John do the work with Bob Houseal finding out if they are doing it right.

LAST CALL TO CLASS

"Merrily we roll along, roll along — to start another new week." Every Tuesday members of the journalism class paste their stories in a special scrapbook for credit and later reference in years to come. Lester Hamil and Evelyn Miller are cutting their stories from the Journal. Shirley Peterson and Eloise Springer are applying a smeary substance called paste to theirs, and Helen Raber (sitting) is placing the stories in the book.

"Yum! Yum! Boy that smells good." The seventh period homemaking class composed of Virginia Wehr, Hazel Bradshaw, Elizabeth Caldwell, and Virginia McLaughlin are making fudge. Maybe the girls will go into the candy making business after they graduate.

"It's all in knowing how to keep your mind on your sociology"—at least, that's what Jim Gallagher, Eleanor Turner, Marjorie Ahrens, Margaret Schneider, and Eleanor Kimmel think. But evidently Betty Redlinger isn't so sure,

"Umm, Boy! I bet this is good" thinks Miss Minick as she dips a helping of escalloped potatoes for herself at the Girl Reserve Dad's night supper. Miss Minick, Dorothy Darnel, Audrey Hotle, Miss Stivers, Miss Mercer, and Bette Michels are shown partaking of the delicacies at the supper.

"My! My!" exclaims Don Burger as he examines this bullet shell that was exhibited to the American History class supervised by Miss Minick. Various other articles are being examined by Allan Atkinson, Bob Birney, Paul Dodder, Don Burger, and Ruth Hotle.

Comprised of almost one hundred students, this group headed the many cars in the demonstration against the failure of the renewal of Fred Maasdam's contract. Almost five hundred, bearing banners and shouting their loyalty to Fred, were lead through downtown streets by the twirlers, Betty Simons and Ginger Robertson.

FOOTBALL

Our football team of last season was a light, fast group of boys who enjoyed playing the game and gave to it all they could possibly give.

Our squad was rather inexperienced having only six letter winners from last year's team. The new fellows, though, were willing to learn and ready for work so, as the season progressed the team became more and more seasoned.

Our season consisted of two non-conference games and seven Little Six battles. Of these we won two; lost six and tied one. The Demons defeated Keokuk 17-0, Columbus Junction 24-0; were tied by Tipton 6-6 and were defeated by Ottumwa, Fairfield, Muscatine, Mount Pleasant, Fort Madison, and Burlington.

THE SQUAD

 First Row: Don Sheperd, Dick Marshall, Captain Bob Lewis, Don Keisey, Don Voorhees

BASKETBALL

This year in basketball our high school team battled through a tough schedule to win eight games and lose twelve. The Demons bested Wapello 27-25 in an overtime to advance to the final in the sectional where they defeated Mediapolis 34-27. The Demons were then defeated by Sigourney 29-26 in the first round of the district held at Fairfield.

The squad this year was composed of young, fast boys, somewhat lacking in experience yet well balanced by Captain Bob Lewis, Frank Dea, Don Sheperd and Bob Lowe of last year's team. Coached by Mr. Kimberlin these boys used a combination fast break-slow break offense backed by a shifting man to man defense.

The Demons finished sixth in conference standings winning four and losing eleven league contests. Bob Lowe, flashy sophomore, was second only to Gerald Wagner from Ft. Madison in individual scoring. He was also honored by being placed on the First Little Six team at forward.

Those boys leaving the team this year are: Captain Bob Lewis, Frank Dea, and Don Sheperd.

First Row: Ned Barden, Bob Lowe, Jack Mace, T. J. Berdo, Terry Anderson.

The Demon track squad of this season, captained by Jack Mace, participated in nine meets; namely the Little Six Indoor, State Indoor, Oskaloosa Relays, Mount Pleasant dual, and Mount Pleasant Triangular, Fort Madison Relays, District, Little Six Outdoor, State Outdoor. Of these nine meets the first five have been run. The Imps placed well in those meets and it is the wish of the school that they carry on through the remaining contests equally well.

This year's squad composed of several freshmen, sophomores and juniors represents a team that will carry on next season with many improvements to its credit.

In absence next year will be Jack Mace who runs the 100 yard dash, 220 yard dash, 200 yard low hurdles. He anchors the 440 and 880 relay teams and broad jump.

Milo Steele, also a senior, participates in the 440 and 880 relays; he high jumps, broad jumps and pole vaults.

Lloyd Scott puts the 12 pound shot, high jumps, runs 440 yard dash and the mile relay.

Tom Randall runs in the mile relay and 440 yard dash.

Ned Barden runs in the mile relay.

• Dick Knupp participates in the half mile run.

CHEER LEADERS

Few of us, when attending an athletic contest, realize the important part the Cheer Leaders play in winning a game. Their enthusiastic yells seem to envelop the spectators with an atmosphere of excitement and determination. Sagging spirits return to normal; excited ones grow even more frenzied, and the players, tired and weary from their gruelling test, seem to gain new courage. Without them, no basketball or football game would be complete. They are as much a part of the game as the team, the referee, or the spectators. When everyone else is "down in the dumps", and the score is 0-0, 1 minute to go, they leap from the sidelines like human dynamos, and soon have us yelling madly, shouting encouragement to the team, determined to win that game.

Let's take a look, now, at these energetic individuals:

In the upper right hand are Betty Stewart and Marjorie Faulkner, putting the "snap" on one of their yells, and not being held up, as the usual observer might assume. In the lower right hand corner, Audrey Hotle, Bob Gray, and Betty Stewart, swing out with an encouraging, "Come on gang, let's let 'em have it!"

As a result of the great interest he has shown in the welfare of the pupils, our school systems have advanced rapidly to higher standards, and they have not reached a standstill as yet.

Mr. Ralston, we believe, has a right to claim his share of the praise given those who helped in establishing the modern educational program that we now have in our two new elementary schools, which reached completion the forepart of this year.

DEAN OF JUNIOR COLLEGE

The junior college marks the completion of formal education for a large and increasing proportion of young people. By 1950 predictions are that half of all students enrolled in the first two years of the colleges in the United States will be found in the junior colleges. As a community institution our college is supplementing the present effort of our high school to provide the kind of educational service which both young people and adults need. This concept embodies two types of service: first terminal courses to produce social and civic competency and; second liberal arts or pre-professional training for those who are going forward to senior college or university study.

PRINCIPAL

The modern high school concerns itself with more than academic training. It makes contact with every phase of the lives of the boys and girls within its classes. Worthy home membership, good citizenship, vocational preparation are its slogan. It strives to prepare for living today as well as for life tomorrow.

These girls posing in back of the piano are evidently in a happy frame of mind. In case you don't remember, it is the girls' trio, composed of Marjorie Walker, Ione Steele, and June Garrett—all seniors. Pictured with them is their faithful pianist, Bette Michels.

Our girls' sextet has become a very popular and well known vocal group this year. It too, is composed of seniors—namely—June Garrett, Ione Steele, Marjorie Walker, Margaret Hennon, Mary Walker, and Lucille Murphy; and again, we have Bette Michels as pianist.
